

- 151- Ibid. This camp is located along the rolling hills of Northern Virginia near Dumfries. It was placed in such a position as to cover the line of the Neabsco-Occoquan and the Batteries on the Potomac at Freestone Point and Evansport.
- 152- Ibid., William Dorsey Pender to his wife, December 11, 1861.
- 153- Record of Events, Companies C and E, 6th North Carolina State Troops, November and December, 1861.
- 154- William Dorsey Pender to his wife, December 24, 1861, William Dorsey Pender Papers.
- 155- G. T. Beavers to his brother, December 30, 1861, Isham Sims Unchurch Papers; Robert F. Webb to Lucie Mangum, December 31, 1861, Adolphus Williamson Mangum Papers.
- 156- Robert F. Webb to Lucie Mangum, December 31, 1861, Adolphus Williamson Mangum Papers.
- 157- Ibid. Oysters seem to have been extremely plentiful and cheap during the ~~1861-1865~~ Nineteenth Century.
- 158- Ibid.
- 159- Ibid.
- 160- Ibid.
- 161- Ibid. Washington, Georgetown, and Alexandria were not seriously effected by the Potomac Blockade because of good railway connections with Philadelphia and the Northeast.
- 162- Ibid.
- 163- Ibid.
- 164- Gilbert E. Govan and James W. Livingood, A Different Valor, The Story of General Joseph E. Johnston, C. S. A. (Indianapolis and New York: The Bobbs-Merrill Company, Inc., 1956), p. 81.
- 165- Special Orders No. 41, Section IV, December 24, 1861, General and Special Orders, Gen. W. H. C. Whiting's Command; William J. H. Durham Records, War Department Collection, Confederate Records Group 109.
- 166- William Hicks to Henry T. Clark, December 9, 1861, Henry T. Clark Papers.
- 167- The Hillsborough Recorder, Hillsborough, N. C., January 8, 1862.
- 168- Ibid.
- 169- Ibid.
- 170- Ibid.